

ECB Preview (7th September) – Focus on euro appreciation

- ECB policymakers to start discussing the future of policy stimulus measures (beyond this year), but no decisions are expected to be announced until October at the earliest.
- As such, key interest rates, asset purchases (€60bn a month until the end of the year) and forward guidance are all expected to be left unchanged.
- There will be intense scrutiny of whether Mr Draghi expresses concerns about potential euro “overshooting”. We expect him to say recent euro strength reflects stronger economic fundamentals, but to warn against excessive moves.
- A stronger euro is expected to result in slight downward revisions to the ECB’s inflation forecasts, while growth forecasts are expected to remain largely unchanged.

ECB WORKING ON FUTURE POLICY MIX

At the last policy meeting on 20th July, President Draghi confirmed the ECB’s intention to continue with its monthly asset purchases of €60bn until the end of the year. The key message was that a discussion on the future of the QE programme, from next year, will take place in the “autumn”. We believe it is too early for any details to be announced at next week’s meeting on 7th September. In our view, the most likely outcome in terms of policy is a hint from Mr Draghi that the current pace of asset purchases and the overall mix of policy will be reassessed at next month’s meeting on 26th October, when concrete policy options are likely to be presented.

The minutes of the July meeting stated the desire to “gain more policy space and flexibility to adjust policy and the degree of monetary policy accommodation, if and when needed, in either direction”. This suggests that, as the upturn gains further traction, the ECB is looking to move towards a more flexible, data-dependent orientation for policy. The most likely outcome in early 2018 is probably a further reduction in the pace of asset purchases, without committing yet to tapering towards zero. With underlying price pressures still considered to be subdued, Mr Draghi could repeat the need for “patience, persistence and prudence”. Hence, any withdrawal of stimulus is likely to be gradual.

WILL DRAGHI COMMENT ON RECENT EURO STRENGTH?

Next week’s meeting will be framed by updated economic forecasts and the marked appreciation of the euro in recent months. Since the last set of economic forecasts three months ago, the euro has risen by nearly 10% against the US dollar and around 5% in trade-weighted terms. The minutes of the July meeting expressed concerns about “possible overshooting” in the foreign currency markets. Markets will therefore be watching the press conference with Mr Draghi, starting at 13:30BST, very closely for any comments on the currency.

We anticipate he will indicate that a key reason for the euro’s appreciation is the improved outlook for the Eurozone economy. In that sense, its strengthening is a vote of confidence in the Eurozone’s economic prospects. Nevertheless, given the euro’s reaction to his lack of comment on the currency at the Jackson Hole symposium last month, we expect him to warn against excessive moves which raise the risk of 'overshooting' and could delay the sustained return of inflation towards the ECB's goal.

Chart 1: The euro has appreciated significantly in recent months and is back above pre-QE levels

Chart 2: Consensus forecasts for Eurozone inflation are higher than the ECB’s, despite the stronger euro

RESILIENT GROWTH MEANS LIMITED INFLATION DOWNGRADE

Economic indicators suggest that the economy has remained resilient so far to the currency's appreciation. The export component of the Eurozone manufacturing PMI, for instance, increased in August to the strongest level since 2011. We expect the ECB's growth forecast – previously 1.9% this year, 1.8% in 2018 and 1.7% in 2019 – will be kept broadly unchanged. Given that the stronger euro is, to a significant degree, a reflection of more positive economic prospects, there is some uncertainty on the extent to which lower import prices will feed through to lower consumer price inflation. On balance, we expect downward revisions to headline CPI inflation – previously projected to average 1.5% this year, 1.3% in 2018 and 1.6% in 2019 – will probably be marginal. Nevertheless, it would reinforce the expectation that policy will remain accommodative going into 2018.

CONTACT DETAILS

Hann-Ju Ho

T: 02071581745

E: hann-ju.ho@lloydsbanking.com

DISCLAIMER

This document is confidential, for your information only and must not be distributed, in whole or in part, to any person without the prior consent of Lloyds Bank plc ("Lloyds Bank"). This document has been prepared for information purposes only.

This document has been prepared by Lloyds Bank Commercial Banking, Economics and Market Insight. The author's views should not be taken as necessarily being those of the wider Lloyds Banking Group plc, nor considered objective or unbiased. The author of this document may know the nature of Lloyds Bank's trading positions or strategies in anticipation of this document. Any views, opinions or forecast expressed in this document represent the views or opinions of the author and are not intended to be, and should not be viewed as advice or a personal recommendation.

This document is not independent from Lloyds Bank's proprietary interests, which may conflict with your interests. Lloyds Bank may trade as principal, may have proprietary positions, and/or may make markets in any instruments (or related derivatives) discussed in this document. Trading personnel may be indirectly compensated in part based on the size and volume of their transactions, but the outcome of any transaction that may result from this document will not have a direct bearing on the compensation of any trading personnel. Lloyds Bank may engage in transactions in a manner inconsistent with the views expressed in this document and Lloyds Bank's salespeople, traders and other professionals' may provide oral or written market commentary or strategies to clients, which may conflict with the opinions expressed in this document.

We make no representation and give no advice in respect of legal, regulatory, tax or accounting matters in any applicable jurisdiction. You should make your own independent evaluation, based on your own knowledge and experience and any professional advice which you may have sought, on the applicability and relevance of the information contained in this document.

The material contained in this document has been prepared on the basis of publicly available information believed to be reliable and whilst Lloyds Bank has exercised reasonable care in its preparation, no representation or warranty, as to the accuracy, reliability or completeness of the information, express or implied, is given. This document is current at the date of publication and the content is subject to change without notice. We do not accept any obligation to any recipient to update or correct this information. This document is not directed toward, nor does it constitute an offer or solicitation to, anyone in any jurisdiction or country where such distribution or use would be contrary to local law or regulation. Lloyds Bank, its directors, officers and employees are not responsible and accept no liability for the impact of any decisions made based upon the information, views, forecasts or opinion expressed.

Lloyds Banking Group plc and its subsidiaries may participate in benchmarks in any one or more of the following capacities; as administrator, submitter or user. Benchmarks may be referenced by Lloyds Banking Group plc for internal purposes or used to reference products, services or transactions which we provide or carry out with you. More information about Lloyds Banking Group plc's participation in benchmarks is set out in the Benchmark Transparency Statement which is available on our website.

Lloyds Bank is a trading name of Lloyds Bank plc and Bank of Scotland plc. which are both subsidiaries of Lloyds Banking Group plc. Lloyds Bank plc. Registered Office: 25 Gresham Street, London EC2V 7HN. Registered in England and Wales no. 2065. Bank of Scotland plc. Registered Office: The Mound, Edinburgh EH1 1YZ. Registered in Scotland no. SC327000. Authorised by the Prudential Regulation Authority and regulated by the Financial Conduct Authority and the Prudential Regulation Authority under registration numbers 119278 and 169628 respectively.