It would be interesting to know what starting lot sizes u're using.

I am using MM, so the starting lot size grown with the balance.

Presently it's using 0.01 per 1600€ Portion Balance. Now PB is 93210 and the starting lot size is 0.58

Check out Blessing's performance on my demo accounts.

Whoops 😵 forgot about that. Took it for granted. 😬
Biut the two set files have distinct EANumber. 😄

Sorry Tramp, I should have looked at the files, but thought it was worth mentioning anyway in case somebody simply tried to follow your instructions from the post.

Like this you will have Blessing1 (with FMC=1) that trades only when the trend is up, and Blessing2 (with FMC=2) that trades only when the trend is down.

Tramp, you need to shift your numbers down one:

FMC 0 = Up trend
FMC 1 = Down trend
FMC 2 = Ranging trend

I have another idea
you use the same setting file when blessing1 go to the wrong way over 2 levels , then you open the same timeframe chart using the same   ng file blessing1 --> long over 2 levels

blessing2 --> short 1 levels

they will trade both ways
it will more better than using hedge function or not .

i test it on my demo account .

i hope it work .

RE: Trade both ways! Summary.

There is another way I know of that is worth some thought IMO...

When you see that B3 is caught in a possible pivot, since the MA will determine the trend and therefore if a Buy/Sell is used (default like setting) you simply wait for the "Trend is UP" (if in a Sell) sign and turn on your second chart with the SAME SETTING which will now be trading the right way of the trend. -Don't forget to change the EA #.

Then, use the "shut down" feature for the chart that is in a DD so it clo es out and keep the other one running until it gets caught in a pivot, then just repeat this process.

If there isn't a big trend change after you think there might be, it's no big deal to close out one of the charts with the auto "Shut down" feature because f it isn't trending hard then it's bouncing back & forth and "channeling" no doubt and will close out. So it's kind of a win-win senario ~
What say you?....

Ratz Without safety, -what do you really have?..

What say you?....

ive been doing this sort of way in all of my accounts. using shut down feature twice a day (recently tried thrice a day) . i use groups of identical setfiles example:

group1: AM shutdown false; PM shutdown true group2: AM shutdown true; PM shutdown false

see my one of my accounts doing this method in the signature.

REMINDER: when using these kind of methods to trade both ways, set PortionPC and MaxDDPercent accordingly to avoid EP hit.

RE: Trade both ways! Summary.

I trading both way at the moment EU, using the published set file from jtatoday (since it is fast and easy to find 😄). I didn't use force direction feature. I agreed with the above mentioned observation that Blessing keeps following the same direction after each trade completion. So far, both still trading opposite ways.   W, I started the 2nd EA when the message showing the opposite direction.

Regarding shutdown feature, I used it when both EA (i.e. long and shot) each have 2 active trades ongoing. I tested two or three times and it worked okay...it shutdown after a while. May be I'll do the experiment again when I reach the side ay movement, with each EA loaded with 2-3 active trades.
