subscribed 😊 any nice setup for Labour day?

You will come to learn it doesn't work like that 😊 you won't find any setup ideas or signals here just a bucket of information that you will have you plough through over time to learn.

Here is me playing emotional turmoil with AUDJPY this morning though took a short as on hourly it was double top, candle formation indicated reversal off the key level. Saw it stalling closed early, should have held opened long on the reverse and lost some pips I guess because of bank holiday the market is also quite slow today.

AUDJPY -1.5 over two trades

USDJPY M1 +5PIPS SHORT

This is my favorite style of trading.

- First of all, you can see a series of lower tops with notable volume. I love when this happens. This is an indication that eventually MMs will push PA down
  - I got a break of the 200EMA with a big red candle and notable volume
  - I waited for a retrace and entered
- Got my target and exited.

This is my first post on this thread, but I have been lurking for quite some time. I've been hopping back and forth between trying different methods and I think I just need to fully immerse myself in one and just go with it. Feel free to critique or give positive criticism, I'm trying to learn. Also, thank you to CG for starting the thread and to all others who have graciously contributed and devoted their time to helping others learn as well. I hope to soon be able to post more charts and provide learning material for future traders. -gilly {image}...

You entered too early. You needed to wait until PA tries to bounce back to Dragon and you should have entered after that.

Hi all! 😊 I've got a general question regarding money management and lotsize. How do you calculate your max. lotsize? Is it a percentage of your account size (of course depending on your SL)? If so, what percentage do you recommend? Or do you use a different approach? I'm currently using a position size calculator to calcute my lotsize roughly (e.g. <http://www.myfxbook.com/forex-calculators/position-size>) but I would like to know what risk ratio is reasonable (I'm currently using approx. 1%). Good luck for the upcoming trading...

Please watch this video that explains about lot size.

A second bad trade on UJ. {image} I initially got in because the big red bar + dragon + LL. However I started doubting the trade when I saw HL HH, I should have gone out close to BE. I got lucky with the news, I need to fix this behavior. I'm done for the day.

If you checked the M5 TF prior to placing your trade you would have seen PA was trading above the dragon and bounced of it, there was only around 3-4 to the 50MA. Also if you put the 200MA on your chart you would have seen that large bearish candle you entered on closed above it. Its always a good idea to check the higher timeframes, especially M5 & M15 before you place any trades as you want to know what PA is doing in the 'bigger picture'. Although M5 and M15 are not exactly high timeframes, its also a good idea to check H1 too.

Thank you so much for your analysis Vape.

Looking at your charts I can see how bad an lucky my entry was. I'm gonna add 200MA as an additional filter and I'm gonna make sure to always check the higher timeframes first.

Our New Scalpers...keep in mind, scalping as we do is an art. Once the strength of our PVSRA charts are understood and a good understanding of how PA is manipulated by MM's, and banks, with practice it will all come together.

Then you will understand how to gain insight from the market and trade WITH the smart money. 🧐

Scalping is akin to a sniper. We stalk our prey (price action) watch and learn it's momentum and key levels as S & R and pull the trigger.....with pips banked...and no bodies 😊

GBPUSD +7

High volume on tops, price forming a double top, got in after strong rejection by 1.297. Used R1 as TP line.

USDJPY M1 +5PIPS SHORT

- PA reached RWL
  - After that a green candle failed to break the Dragon and PA started to go bearish again
  - So based on the two facts above, I entered when PA broke the 111.750 key level with a red candle and notable volume
- Got my target and exited.

UJ m1 short +5 Overall downtrend on m5 and m15, broke WL just 30 minutes ago. Dragon holds, bearish bar breaks RWL with significant volume. I set my limit under RWL with tp 5 pips after spread. Last trade for the day. Thank you all for your posts and your insights on my trades, I'm learning a lot. {image} {quote} Yup, doing that, but one thing that never comes up is the SL. I'm guessing they are 10 pips.

Each trader must decide based on their account size and pain tolerance. Personally, I set a 20 pip SL as a emergency stop do to platform or system failure and manage each trade like a hawk. 🦅

If I observe PA began to stall or retrace, then make a decision to stay the trade or close based on the current PA momentum

relative to S & R key levels and experience with that currency pair, (ie., session, time of day news events etc, etc) but each trader must decide for themselves.....🤔

This is the reason I suggest that traders only stalk 1 or 2 pairs to get to know and understand their movement. One key mistake that I have found through the years is many traders watch too many pairs ( I was guilty as charged in the beginning) afraid they will miss a trade in lieu of observing and learning only a select couple.

Just my 2 cents....🕶️

GBPUSD , EURUSD +18

On the Cable, the price had broken a support with big volume. Waited for a retrace and got in after a favorable candle, very quick trade.

Two trades for the Euro, where price kept making higher lows. Closed both at the previous top.

USDJPY M1 +5PIPS LONG*CT trade

Strong support at 110.750 key level with a red candle that couldn't break it, followed by a big green candle with notable volume.

I targeted a bounce back to Dragon and closed it when the target was reached.

{quote} It looks like you got in when the price was still going down on that big red candle.

so when one enters on a retrace, we enter so as long as there are no red candles during the retrace. Otherwise entry was okay?

And you entered at RDH as possible resistance. I am not at my computer or I could annotate your chart.

Although a good question to learn from.

Maybe another trader can help.. 😎

BAD TRADE... can anybody comment on the mistake or was it just one of those ones that go bad. 5M showed uptrend, switched to 1m and saw price break the RDH with green candle, waited for a retrace (wont show cuz high spread) Price was above 200MA and dragon slope was good. {image} {image}

I'm far from experienced compared to the other guys here, however what I've learned some far from how the other trades and from my own mistakes :

- most experienced scalpers here open positions with high volume candles, your entry seems late.
- you entered at half number with low volume bar
- rdh is not a fixed support/resistance and MM will use it for stop hunt.
- the big red bar after your entry has high volume, it could be seen as an opportunity to cut your losses short.
- RDH broken from the above could have also been an opportunity to cut your losses.
- change to a low spread broker, I opened a demo account just to see how it goes and it makes a huge difference. You should really consider it if plan to keep scalping.

- I know it's easy to make an analysis after the waters have calmed, but, although a risky entry, I could see the previous high break with the second bar a good entry, risky because it's so close do RDH

Just my 2 cents, hope it helps 😊 eurjpy short PA over-extended, CT (not PVSRA), EP on pin bar under 800 key level with tight stop, FIFO with EA closing, some slippage, pips banked. (could have targeted the dragon if with patience and risk tolerance) {image}
