Happy New Year Pivoters
Lets make 2017 very profitable year.

I am scaling back how often I will post here. This takes lots of my time and family and frankly almost nobody here from original group hence got tired of "grooming" folks only to see them disappear and new folks coming asking same questions and cycle repeating.

I am going to focus on my trading and personal development.. I shared a ton here and if you find it useful this thread then apply it but with every system you must control the risk.
wish you the best

My last 6 months of results my oanda mt4 goes back only as far as 6months.

Pair worth putting on your watchlist

AC at strong support however you must wait for market intentions on new year to see which way Aussie will get pushed.

When trading crosses please look at the majors AC is basically AU+UC difference of this becomes AC. It's a good habit always to look at the majors for clues for crosses.

Have currently NU longs UJ shorts AN longs and EU longs on various levels. Looking to get in on AU longs hopefully at lower below 72

Have a pipsful new year. Davit thank you so much for this thread again. May the pips be with you. 😊 {image}

You welcome.Thanks everyone for well wishes. Its important that you give this system at least 3 months to test out.You must have larger sample size to see the edge.

Most of you won't be here in 3 months as already proven 95% of guys posting from the beginning of this thread no longer here.

Most of you won't be here in 5 months as already proven 99 % of guys posting from the beginning of this thread no longer here. Its important to develop commitment because framing this in narrow parameters allows clarity OF EXECUTION.This is why jumping from system to system is counterproductive and costly.

Stay focused and master one technique before moving on to another.
cheers

AJ
too many nice set ups
harmonic butterfly H1 just a confluence

Its important to realize that I trade 15-H1 charts but always have bigger picture in mind. For Example I do anticipate AN breaking up 4480 and heading to 7000 when exactly hard to pin point. Could be this month and could take 3 months or 1 week. People who draw lines and firmly say I will take TP when price gets to XX number are somehow out of touch how market works. Market goes in multiple waves before reaching certain level hence plenty of opportunities to get in and get out and still maintain overall trajectory.

Great job guys

As you can see hitting pips is not difficult. Difficulty is waiting for right time. Keep remember that key zones are 61-100

Lets see how many of you will be here 😊 in 3 months

Good chance Andy,Tamarind,Ibar51,Rocky might be here.In truth I will continue to trade how I trade but its important to me that you guys develop longer term edge developing and sampling.

Its the only way to really test out a system.You might get lucky few times but struggle to close a loser and everything that comes with that.Trading to me is an art form.Its probability over series of trades.

I might be the only trader here keeps bringing up probability factor, here at FF.Its the real soul behind how I trade. Someone asked me few weeks ago why I didn't think EA was worth shorting.Well based on probability factors it did not have an edge.That's it keep focusing on the edge.Sample size matters.Think like a casino.They have roughly 3% edge and that's enough to generate millions.I think my system has better edge lot more then 3% Keep honing your skills

Davit, I have been a silent background reader in your threads for long. Reread alot of your posts and all other TMS threads, now i think i am starting to have an idea of your probability method. I have decided to write a post here as your contribution open my eyes and mind in pivot and harmonic which i discarded them long ago. Credit to you. Will demo trade for 3 months and see if i am successfully with this pivot and harmonic trading stuff. (the book: bird watching in lion country is indeed a good read. I have gained the wisdom within.Good recommendation)...

try trading with some real money micro level otherwise you will not learn much.

Everyone makes money on demo and lose in real account.Difference is trading psychology. You may not care closing a loser on demo but that exactly what you should do in real account.

Again demo is useless.It gives you false sense of security.

Sorry for my english, German is my mother tongue. The history of a false entry. On the 21st of December I am on sale between 1.33565 and 1.33800. I was so stupid and had not hedged the trade. Instead of going south, the course went farther north. Now the question came to me: Get off or keep running. I decided to let the trade continue. Why? My hope was that he was turning at the 1.36000. To my luck, it was so, because if it had run on, then here would be my exit, so good 250 pips loss. David always writes that the key point lies between 61 and 100....

Hi Skipper

You must always have plenty of reserve troops when trading meaning never expose your account to the level that you get panicky and nervous.

Drawdown is part of trading and at times trades do go into DD but managing DD is very important.There must be cut out point and that you decide how much is enough.

Example last night EA dropped hard to 100S taking out all stops then turning North.This happens lot of times and honestly I went to sleep without even thinking and this morning all my orders are in profit.

There is element of time involve with trades some short and some longer.

cheers

No waiting to long.

I prefer long side where overall bigger trend will be heading.I make conscious decisions what direction I like to trade on each pair.Once that is established then rest is entering at key levels.

I already posted my posoitions earlier

EU long

UJ short (biggest positions)

NU long

{quote} Hi Davit , all of the best for 2017 for you and all the pivoteers. May the odds be in your favour! I'm holding shorts on UJ which I've been building, were wondering what your TP targets for shorts are. I did read you mentioned 105 few pages back, still shooting for that number? quite a stretch, however, with some time, it could easily reach there and beyond. {image}

Its general TP but obviously lot can happen fundamentally once Trump takes over. It will be real tough to implement and pass the Budget Trump wants which has "tremendous" his favorite word 😊 spending.

Without this inflationary spending pass that must contain raising the dept ceiling (real challenge to raise the ceiling)it will be hard for Feds to raise rates.My instinct tells me Strong dollar = capital gains loss hence hurts the economy and I won't be surprised to see 1st Q to be restrictive and not much of growth.

In basic terms I am USD bear.

My understanding is the bigger trend, is the prevailing trend on the weekly and monthly charts from a technical perspective and macro themes/sentiments (based on how the nos stack up) from a fundamental perspective. I will appreciate your comments. Cheers.

I agree its confusing statement. I meant in general where weekly and monthly is heading however there are lots of exceptions like EU for example could be the beginning of a new trend going north. So discretion is always there where you are in relation to pivots and weekly monthly.

I don't think there is much liquidity left today so price may drift down slowly but you should put it on your WATCH list for next week

In my experience institutions like going with the trend so Mon,Tues Weds anticipate more bear action and Thurs and Friday correction. That's just general guide which I noticed.Specially Asia will continue pretty much where NY left in general majority of times.So 6960 NU may become 6920 by Weds

You should not place orders to carry over this week since new week is uncertain of direction yet.

NFP was a mix bag. Red numbers on Job but Earnings were up so overall numbers were bullish for USD since Dec job creation traditionally has been weak because of holidays.

It will be lot more interesting once Trump takes over and budget fights begin.

Hi T

Everything depends on value

UC shorting at 36 makes sense buying does not. EA buying now makes sense selling not. I agree that I make decisions on pairs in direction almost same. I rarely if ever went long on UC or AC but always shorted both and always won. Once again value.

This thread is not going to get diluted with shit.I have seen several system threads where page 1 looks 100% different then page 100 and people can't make sense what is happening.

This really upsets me.Carry on!

Carney speaking at 9am and might move G pairs.Which way hard to say.I am deducing recent good economic data on UK should be positive spin for Carney.

Let me elaborate little more on Rocky's volume charts he posted.

What did we learned from Mark Douglas? There are DYNAMIC traders that have the resources to move price!Do retail traders able to move price? No! Does volume coming from retail positions mean anything? No it means nothing.You can have retail spike in one direction and price move another why? Because retail traders don't move price guys!Volume you get on mt4 is useless!

{quote} Davit did you close ea positions or are you still managing them? I hold the positions but i am afraid 😊

My positions are open because I keep my lots small.You must have a cut out point.You can always reduce by 25% wait and see or get out totally.Based on my system price is at 78S and should bounce north.

You should never fear the market! When you are afraid means your positions are too big vs account.

{quote} Evening folks, Ive attached my GU chart. This was my 3rd batch of pips, a total of 2000+ (500+ 500+ 1000+) this week. Just a word of caution to the newbies, My 3rd batch was -1000 (thats negative 1000) pips at one point, Circled area. I was comfortable holding it for the reasons mentioned above. Although had it gone further south I would have closed it (Or forced to). Either way, this does not mean there were no SL's. Always have an exit plan for each trade. There are fewer entries on the attached chart as i closed half the trades on the...

Excellent trading buddy!

note to new traders notice M is keeping his lots small. That's the key stress free trading and building equity quickly. Sounds contradictory how can one build equity with small lots quickly?
By piling them on! but always keeping reserves.

Almost 100% of rookie account balance blow outs are attributed to leverage and lot sizes. Most don't understand leverage and lot size hence lose when market does its typical spikes

Still short on UJ and got others running as well

PatienceFx he is on my ignore list.Amount of shit coming from this guy is frankly hilarious like if price breaks 100sma then UJ going to the moon! or indicator "senses" and crap like that.

This kind of folks here are common who like idiots believe price has anything to do with moving averages.

Let me give you straight when Goldman Sacks dumps Euro at 108 they are not looking at moving averages!You get it? Price is moved by dynamic traders because they can and has no relevancy with lagging indicators!

You become who you associate with!

To summarize the last week

Went 21-0 not bad and have some DD on EA ,AJ which is reasonable.
Anticipating more UJ pressure on down side and that might push AJ finally down below 85.

EG has huge potential but market can push up to possible 88 to take out weak bears then head south quick to 85. There is positive news that article 50 could be delayed.

Have everyone profitable week.

I recommend when market opens to close this trade even if little profit or have trailing stop or watch closely.

BOC rate decision on weds and USD may bounce beginning of the week. Overall scheme of things UC is already at the bottom range so you really don't have great edge anymore.

google and download all Market Wizards books by Jack D. Schwager. He interviewed dozens of top traders and their insights I emulated in my trading as much as I could.

Example from Hedge Fund Market Wizards

"Your message then is that although traders focus almost entirely on where to enter a trade, in reality, the entry size is more important than the entry price because if the size is right, you are much more likely to stay with a winning trade.

One of the first lessons my first boss taught me was that price is irrelevant; it is all about controlling the size of your position. On a related point, liquidity is also very important. That is why when a merger deal breaks, we cut it straight away because you get a pocket of liquidity. It may be at a much lower level, but at least you have the liquidity. If you wait, the liquidity can dry up, and you will be left with an outsized position in what has become a directional trade."

and more gems

"Trade Within Your Comfort Zone

If a position is too large, the trader will be prone to exit good trades on inconsequential corrections because fear will dominate the decision process. As Clark advises, you have to "trade within your emotional capacity." Similarly, Vidich warns, "Limit your size in any position so that fear does not become the prevailing instinct guiding your judgment." In this sense, a smaller net exposure may actually yield better returns, even if the market ultimately moves in the favorable direction. For example, Taylor came into 2008 with a large net long exposure in high beta stocks in an increasingly risky market. Uncomfortable with the level of his exposure, Taylor sharply reduced his positions in early January. When the market subsequently plunged later in the month, he was well positioned to increase his long exposure. Had Taylor remained heavily net long, he might instead have been forced to sell into the market weakness to reduce risk, thereby missing out in fully participating in the subsequent rebound."

From this thread recently posted.

How relevant is that?

Hopefully you guys see my inspiration are wide from math to art and trading experts. What I share here on this thread is pure gold and I am saying this without ego. I banned many traders from here and some even good ones like Rocky who could not follow instruction and that's the key to follow set of philosophy method that works and perfect it. Once you are fluid and profitable then you can tinker to suits your needs but until then master what is shared here. You can't break rules that you don't understand to begin with.

Its true I make a decision on pairs in one direction then try to get in at key pivots.
GU ONLY long wont sell at these discounted prices. Game plan is to buy the dips!

As Mike already mention 270 ADR is huge for this pair and I do anticipate a correction to south which should be great to build up longs

One always reads about trends at FF and everywhere and meanwhile get killed on corrections and spikes. To be honest I no longer think in terms of trend I think in terms of swings

Example slow pair like EUR/CHF

Tight range from S61 to R38 perfect pair to build positions. Yes its slow but advantage is you won't get killed.

Another myth is one needs lots of movement to make money. Not true

1 position at 100 pips is 100 pips

2 positions at 50 pips distance is same

3 positions at 50 pip move is more than 100 pip at 1 position. You follow me right? Therefore slow pairs can be lot more profitable with less risk than animals like GN GJ GA where mistake there will be costly but mistake here on E/CHF hardly noticeable.

Guy's you must be street smart make it work for your advantage. Have you seen me ever on this thread trade GJ GN GA? NO never and for good reason. There is logic behind what I do

In my opinion this debate about using someone else's pivot is disrespectful towards Davit. Simply because its another indi, next you will use another TDI, another ADR and then another type of candles? Besides, the only difference between original davit's pivots and this voty you guys are using is that the later one shows you past pivots, why would you need that anyway? Just my two cents, Regards

Hi D

I actually approved Voti work on the pivot and some like Mch1970 uses regularly and its fine. I take no offense anyone using it. Only difference you see past history pivot levels.

I kind of agree with you that I found no use for it and went back to more or less original pivot indi with flat lines. Since I am trading swings its irrelevant to me where the pivots were last week since average swing lasts less then a week. This kind of cleanses my brain from clutter. New Week new pivots new trades.

Regards

Try this. Don't press any sell or buy unless price hits 61 1st then you watch PA reaction then make your move 61-100 and no other trades. If nothing hits then don't trade.

Not trading is part of trading. Just walk away do something else like playing golf like you do. You are not going to miss out on anything. There is always something coming close to the zone. Cheers buddy

I should of been more careful considering its Jan every major player is positioning their trades for the year and Aussie looks like "safe" investment.

ECB at 8.30 hopefully Dragi shows little sign of life

So far up 10% for the month but do have good chunk DD that I will chip away.I don't know if this helps you but overall my strategy is trade small and plan for the worse scenario.

No specific site Berry just my experience.AUD and NZD traditionally has been carry over trades and usually 1st refuge when uncertainty prevail.Looking how AUD and NZD surged last week it was obvious that lots of funds were moving on them since there were no real stats or fundy news.Conclusion was obvious.

Davit's Fundamental-Technical Posts since beginning Pivot Trading

Update: Saturday, January 6, 2018

Should Price reach 100S keep in mind that it might go lower. There is modest distance on daily in yellow box that could test. When I build positions I always assume my 1st entry might be my worse hence why I spread my entries. For now its in my interest for the Aussie to get weaker.

NU +85pips

Kept it 8hrs but not going south so taking what I can. USD still weak so this might go higher since I think UJ can still continue going lower which creates momentum for other majors to follow.

With this mindset its best I stay clear from buying USD for now. Does not mean NU can't drop below 72 but I trade what is right for me.

after poor data on AUD I anticipate EA finally to continue going north.This has been rather strenuous trades for lot of folks here including MoneyTalk and others.Light end of the tunnel.I anticipate once London and NY come in play this will go higher.

If you look at the UC its going up slightly so if AU and UC move same pace not much bear action on AC

That's my reasoning.Closed open new fronts to battle.Sort of moving troops around.

Generally I don't like to focus on 1 currency.Between EA AJ and AC my exposure to Aussie dollar is too great.Had to trip the herd.Another reason why...closed my AC

As you can see daily 380-60 zone has been major support for this pair and its likely to get there hence why only invested 25% of my intended lots so far. In general terms this is by far "safest" long positions to build since money always flows to Aussie...and NZD economy is not great either. Funny part I do want it to go lower to load more even though that might add some DD it will be minor.

How do you think will NZD CPI data tomorrow affect AN? Will it have a tendency to whiplash to S200? I moved my micro SL further back just in case.

Please read the thread specially on Mark Douglas which has been posted over and over again and even recently some pages back. I don't need to know what is going to happen to make money. I don't know the future. My trading style is trade small and expect and plan for the worse. So to answer your question price can drop to 200 and I would not care. You see my SL is huge so not going to get stressed about data that I have no control. Did you notice 100S? ok no more questions its clear right? Read the 1st page!!!
If you have less than 2 yrs experience I advise you leave this thread or you will be banned.
regards

read post 6219 posted by our friend Tamarind77

2. You don't need to know what is going to happen next in order to make money.

Why? Because there is a random distribution between wins and losses for any given set of variables that define an edge. (See number 3.) In other words, based on the past performance of your edge, you may know that out of the next 20 trades, 12 will be winners and 8 will be losers. What you don't know is the sequence of wins and losses or how much money the market is going to make available on the winning trades. This truth makes trading a probability or numbers game. When you really believe that trading is simply a probability game, concepts like right and wrong or win and lose no longer have the same significance. As a result, your expectations will be in harmony with the possibilities. Keep in mind that nothing has more potential to cause emotional discord than our unfulfilled expectations. Emotional pain is the universal response when the outside world expresses itself in a way that doesn't reflect what we expect or believe to be true. As a result, any market information that does not confirm our expectations is automatically defined and interpreted as threatening. That interpretation causes us to adopt a negatively charged, defensive state of mind, where we end up creating the very experience we are trying to avoid. Market information is only threatening if you are expecting the market to do something for you. Otherwise, if you don't expect the market to make you right, you have no reason to be afraid of being wrong. If you don't expect the market to make you a winner, you have no reason to be afraid of losing. If you don't expect the market to keep going in your direction indefinitely, there is no reason to leave money on the table. Finally, if you don't expect to be able to take advantage of every opportunity just because you perceived it and it presented itself, you have no reason to be afraid of missing out. On the other hand, if you believe that all you need to know is:

1. the odds are in your favor before you put on a trade;
2. how much it's going to cost to find out if the trade is going to work;
3. you don't need to know what's going to happen next to make money on that trade; and
4. anything can happen;

Above if understood correctly can transform your trading to professional level. Read it and read it again until it becomes second nature. It's the heart of probability.

Lets take my AN trade. Do I know it will be profitable? No but I do know out of 20 100S/R trades I can hit 80% winning average. That's it. I don't know the outcome of my trades before hand just probabilities of the Edge that is defined on 1st page {quote} Hi Davit, great thread! I love probability. One question, when you enter at 100S like here, is your SL under 138S? And When you say the success rate of 100 R/S trades is 80%, at what level were the 20% failure closed at ? Thank you.

My SL is predetermined based on actual $$ not pips. Usually its 100-300 pips depending how I feel about the trade I might cut lose early or wait it out.

I don't place hard SL since often those get hit but do have one.

{quote} Nice bike! When I was in high school I used to beg my parents for the Honda RVF 400 NC35, never got it though, but I do have an appreciation for the gear-driven cam bikes they are just so unique! The VFR 800 must be a devil! I was born in the early 90's so my appreciation for older bikes isn't that great with the exception of a few of course 😎 When I finished high school my dad bought me a 2009 Suzuki GSXR 600 K9 de-cat with a Yoshimoto R-55 slip-on. Man, what a screamer! She was a write-off @ 10k km on the clock sadly. Then I had the privilege...

Most bikers are passionate people about anything with 2 wheels so it's fine.

Nice bike! Yes, way over the top powerful that you can't even use 10% of it on streets without getting in jail.

There is a good comparison with trading and riding a motorcycle. When you ride a bike, you are in defensive mode. You always assume a person will make that left turn in front of you or do something stupid with 5k pound steel, hence you always look at the driver's eyes, not the car.

Same in trading: the market is huge, therefore a retail trader can do is watch signs that will not squash you. Basically, defensive riding is trading. Not suggesting you should get a bike to learn to trade, but instinct to survive is the same in trading. I always assume the other driver has not seen me until it's safe to pass. Been riding over 20 years without a major accident, knock on wood...

Anyway, keep doing good job. By the way, how can you stare at a yellow chart? 😎

My GU trade from yesterday... starting to look better... still holding on to it. {image}

please pay attention to PA

You started shorting before PA got to 61 then before 78. You should always look at the bigger picture. USD was getting whipped because of Trump ambiguous positions yet to be disclosed but you started early to buy USD even though every major currency was beating the USD! Please pay attention to sentiment!

You might get out hopefully without big damage but let this be a lesson to learn.

still have some DD trades like AJ and EA but not out of control. Twice I could of closed AJ in profit and both times I thought it could get lower below 85 but never did so far. Perhaps a mistake on my part not to have closed those trades. I hate closing winning positions early but Aussie has been mighty powerful of late... To balance out bought lots of Aussie against the NZD.

I go through the news calendar usually on beginning of the week like now and anticipate what is coming up. Please do this as business practice never get caught your pants down because you got hammered on news that you were not aware.

Monday-All about Japan Monetary policy. Could go either way

Tues-CAD GDP projection is positive and CAD could gain specially on crosses.
NZD Employment change-Unemployment rate. Negative here would be good for me since I am long on AN

Weds-Feds day and their statement could reveal Feds further projections. Could be very bullish for USD or Bearish depending on statement.

Thurs-Lots of red news on GBP and I am all hands free trading the pound. Not touching this. Too much uncertainty about Brexit.

Friday-NFP- usually a big mover. Try to stay clear and trade after. Why guess the market?

{quote} Morning Davit! I'm watching EN nice accurate little bounce there from S61 ... I am holding those AN longs from last week, so not really keen to add more NZD short exposure atm... Hope we can reach 1.05 this week been in quite a tight range the last couple of days , both aud and nzd being bought for their yield probably.. hence the tight range imo.

Agree did not expect EA to take this long to reach 43+lot of factors that I could not foresee specially intense support of both NZD and AUD despite of both being on soft grounds fundamentally.

Lot has to do with Trump policies which makes investors nervous and funds going into "safe" zones.
Well what is safe heaven now may not be next month.Forex and sentiment can change quickly in Forex.

Today just closed my 2 NJ entries on + 140 pips. I'm not too focused this week so i will search best exit point for EA and AJ. actually DD on EA and profit on AJ. Have a good day everyone. 😊 also got hammered by EURCHF. DD -200 pips. i will cut it at -300.

E/CHF just hit 61S you must of went long too early.Don't worry too much this pair moves slow and predictable should bounce up next month.

{quote} it seems like it's breaking out but i will give it some space and then act, i don't usually trade this pair, seeing the past, it's been ranging for last 2 months. I would like to hear about your opinion on tonight BoJ news. i'm holding some nice AJ positions, i'm thinking on setting TP at 84.00 if there are good news coming from the Archipel. i'm +300 pips atm with fresh setups from today. 🏆🏆🏆

Same boat on AJ 3 times refused to take TP at 8510 and was a mistake. BOJ could move the Yen or nothing at all since I think they prefer to see how Trump policies and USD is heading.

Yen could stay floating in tight range closed all my AJ shorts +125pips. nothing real money but got sick of waiting for this very extremely stubborn pair to drop.

lesson learned on this pair.Timing is everything

Edit 20 more minutes would of earned me big$$😂 Such is trading.Waited 3 times not taking profits at 8510 area then closed all for peanuts.

Overall I am happy approximately 18% gain for the month.Have DD on AN and EA but they are in manageable size.
